Sometimes life is sweet and easy, and other times it can be challenging. Even when things are difficult, people can adapt and move forward. Strategies to maintain peace of mind can help you feel better about the present and the future.

LIVING YOUR VALUES

People tend to feel best when their lives are in sync with their values.

- Frame daily activities around personal priorities, and spend time on things that are meaningful for you.
- Connect with people who help you feel good about who you are.
- Care for yourself by taking time to eat tasty meals, move around, and rest, which helps keep your body and mind in optimal shape.

More than half of UVA students use mindfulness, deep breathing, meditation, or another spiritual activity to feel better.*

WHEN THINGS DON’T GO AS HOPED

Experiencing setbacks is normal, and you can choose to use them to learn and grow. Let go of things you cannot control. Most UVA students show self-compassion, such as acknowledging their best effort even when an outcome is imperfect. Accepting disappointment and then getting creative about next steps can help manage frustration.

There are many paths to a worthwhile life and a satisfying future. If looking for summer opportunities, focus on the variety of good options available, rather than a single option that seems best.

BUILDING A TOOLBOX

Try out strategies to discover what helps you remain calm and centered, and use them regularly or as needed. Filling your toolbox takes time and practice, and options abound.

- Journal to help process highs and lows and to listen to who you are. It is especially helpful for quieting a busy mind, making sense of feelings, and unwinding before bed.
- Go for a walk to connect with the present and your environment. Pay attention to sights, sounds, smells, and physical sensations.
- Take ten slow, deep breaths to relax your body and your mind. Pausing helps ground yourself in the present.
- Engage your hands to get out of your head. Build something, create art, make music, or fold laundry to rest your mind and get a sense of satisfaction.

If you want a partner to help you find what works for you, or if sadness or worry are overwhelming, seek support from others. Many people here care about you.

RESOURCES

IfYoureReadingThis.org

Personal letters and photos from UVA students sharing mental health journeys and encouraging peers.

Madison House HELP Line
